Huge rises to business rates could be death knell for many firms

By Lucy Purdy

SHELL-SHOCKED traders across the borough have been left fearing for their livelihoods after discovering their business rates are set to rocket in April.

Bombshell letters announcing sudden and dramatic hikes in business tax have been dropping through the letterboxes of shops and offices across Haringey since the new year – leaving some clueless as to how they will find the extra cash. Many are reluctantly contemplating shutting up shop after discovering their rateable value has soared by up to 100 per cent after a revaluation by the Valuation Office Agency.

Phyllis Harper, 62, who has run Highgate Butchers in High Street for 35 years, is horrified at the prospect of paying £23,000 more per year.

Mrs Harper said: "This is frightening. I opened the butchers with my husband Paul who died seven years later, when I was six months pregnant. I live above the shop and the business has allowed me to support two children – this is my life. It's what's kept me going."

"Almost all the independent butchers for miles have had to close so I'm proud I've been able to stay here for so long. I'd hate to see us go over something like a rate increase."

Mrs Harper, who now runs the business with 32-year-old son Lee, hopes to go to tribunal to reduce the sum, but will have to fork out for that too.

Next door, at Le Chocolatier, owner Robert Sinfield faces a staggering hike of 89 per cent. The shop's current rateable value, from which business rates are calculated, has shot up from £16,250 to £30,075. This is then multiplied by the national "multiplier" of 41.4 pence in the pound – in line with inflation – to give the amount each business must pay.

Mr Sinfield said: "If we put our prices up by the same ratio, the business would disappear. That's the only realistic way we could accommodate the rise."

"Where do they think the money's going to come from?"

The changes have been criticised as unfair as they are based on property values and trading conditions in April 2008, before the recession took hold. Some businesses which would have been eligible for small business rate relief will now lose this, as their value has been nudged over the threshold. Haringey Council is legally obliged to collect the rates, but does not set them.

Where do they think the money will come from?

On the other side of the borough, Graziano Parletta, owner of San Marco Restaurant in Bruce Grove, was "flabbergasted" to hear his rateable value had all but doubled, from £11,500 to £22,500. He said: "It's in the realm of countries where there's hyper-inflation."

A spokeswoman for the VOA said overall, rates would rise by three per cent. She said: "Revaluation is designed to maintain fairness by ensuring rateable values reflect changes in the rental market. It is estimated 60 per cent of all properties will see a reduction."

Stadium plans come under fire

By Lucy Purdy

HERITAGE campaigners have slammed proposals for the new Spurs stadium, saying the scheme would destroy important historic areas of Haringey.

Huge "swathes of historic cityscape" would have to be demolished if the proposed 56,000-capacity stadium goes ahead, according to the Victorian Society, which fights to preserve important historic buildings and landscapes.

The Red House in High Road, Tottenham, which features the club's cockerel-and-ball crest, the White Hart pub and an Edwardian red-brick dispensary will be demolished if the scheme gets the green light. The club has defended the scheme, saying it will help fund the restoration of a "more important" terrace of buildings based to the north.

Heloise Brown, the Victorian Society's conservation adviser, said: "The imaginative reuse of historic buildings is rarely regretted but the same could not be said for the demolition of swathes of historic cityscape. Buildings such as the Red House should not be sacrificed to create a bland open space that will be a wasteland apart from on match days."

A hotel, more than 400 homes, a museum and a supermarket are planned for the 20-acre site which lies to the east of High Road. The club will have to prove that its plans preserve and enhance the character of the area.

Defending the scheme, Paul Phillips, director of the Northumberland Development Project, said: "The club is proud of its roots in Haringey and the project will represent an investment of hundreds of millions of pounds into the North Tottenham Conservation Area and create new jobs, homes, shops and public space as well as securing the long-term future of the club in Tottenham.

"The loss of historic buildings is regrettable but our proposals open up the area to the whole community, ensure safe crowd movement on match days and help fund the restoration of the more important terrace of historic buildings to the north.

"We do not accept that the proposed new public square will be a 'bland open space'. We are seeking to ensure this area is vibrant 365 days a year and we believe this is supported by the overwhelming majority of local people."

See the scheme plans at www.tottenhamhotspur.com

Student on a gun charge following raid

A STUDENT from Muswell Hill has been charged with possessing a firearm after a loaded gun and a BB gun were seized by police.

Daniel Stanigar, 22, of Muswell Hill Place, was arrested and taken to Tottenham police station after officers searched a house last week after a tip-off. Computer equipment was seized alongside the loaded guns by officers from Haringey's crime squad.

He will now appear at Wood Green Crown Court on January 15.

Motorcyclist's death smash

A YOUNG motorcyclist died when he was hit by a car in Highgate on New Year's Eve.

The 20-year-old rider, Jack Tungate from Suffolk, was pronounced dead at the scene of the collision at 8.15pm in Archway Road, near Muswell Hill Road. It is thought a Peugeot travelling north hit Mr Tungate travelling south along Archway Road.

Police would like to hear from anyone who saw what happened.

Witnesses should call the Collision Investigation Unit on 020 7388 6806

Dozens of illegal immigrants are caught working for the council

By Lucy Purdy

HARINGEY COUNCIL has come under fire after it emerged the authority has employed 35 illegal immigrants over the past three years.

The council admitted unlawfully signing up the workers from Africa, Jamaica and Trinidad after the details were revealed using a Freedom of Information legislation. Opposition leaders in Haringey have seized upon the revelation as proof of Labour being unfit to run the borough after the authority was exposed as the worst offender of all councils in the UK.

Of the 35 workers later revealed to be in the country illegally, 17 worked for Haringey's traffic department enforcing the council's controlled parking zone policy.

All of these were Nigerian nationals without papers to work in the country. Two managed to secure jobs working with elderly and disabled residents and one Jamaican national had even become assistant manager of a Haringey care home. Another Jamaican national was working as a residential care worker. They were all employed by the council between 2006 and 2009.

Richard Merrin, candidate for Hornsey and Wood Green, slammed the council for falling foul of the law. He said: "I can't believe the procedures at Haringey are so lax that an illegal immigrant can walk in and get a job looking after some of the weakest in society. This is just another example of why Labour is unfit to run the borough. What on earth is Haringey doing?"

Lynne Featherstone, Hornsey and Wood Green MP, added: "Why, even on something as simple as ensuring employees have their papers, does Haringey turn out to be the worst for employing people illegally? Private companies have to comply or get fined.

"The government should take action against those councils which ignore the law."

The 2006 Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act means employers who take on illegal workers can be fined up to £10,000. However, none of the authorities named were fined.

Investigations also revealed that illegal workers had secured jobs at some of the country's most sensitive offices within government, including the headquarters of the UK Border Agency, Whitehall officers of the Home Office and the Ministry of Justice. This is despite a promise made in 2008 by the then Home Secretary Jacqui Smith that guilty bosses would be named and shamed on the Home Office website.

The publication of this information will pile yet more pressure on the council which is still reeling from the Baby Peter tragedy, in which the 17-month-old toddler was tortured to death despite him being placed on the Child Protection Register.

A council spokesman pledged it would avoid employing illegal workers in the future. She said: "In all cases, we took the correct action for dismissal when illegal status became known. We will continue to be vigilant and work closely with other agencies to identify any future cases."

Calls for renewed order to stop queues of casual labourers at Wickes depot

POLICE hope to renew an order allowing them to break up groups of casual labourers waiting for work outside a supplies yard.

The dispersal order, introduced last year around Wickes in Seven Sisters Road, Tottenham, is part of the battle against bosses who sign up illegal employees. Residents and businesses nearby had complained of men loitering at the DIY store, causing nuisance to them and their customers.

One resident living opposite the store in Culvert Road told the Advertiser she had seen men urinate in her neighbour's garden and a man in Greenfield Road said he had been offered cannabis on several occasions.

The St Ann's Safer Neighbourhood team, which regularly patrols the area, sometimes with officers from the UK Border Agency, is now applying to Haringey Council to renew the order for another six months after it expired on Sunday.

Employers who fail to carry out proper checks on migrant workers from outside Europe can face fines of up to £10,000 per illegal employee. Among those queuing when the Advertiser visited was 25-year-old Giovanni Pasaretti, from Romania. He said: "I've been waiting here since 8am. I've been here maybe five or six times."

We speak to the drivers of the lorries that come in and see if they need help. I was working in Italy before, tiling and plastering, and had friends here who told me it was a good life.

"But I've only worked three days since I've been here, on about £80 a day."

Under the dispersal order, police officers and PCSOs have power to disperse groups of two or more at any time. To remain or return to the area after being told to leave is an offence punishable by three months behind bars or a fine up to £2,500. A no-drinking zone is also in place.

Another Romanian, Adrian Frunz, 25, said: "I come down here usually one day a week. I came to the UK the first time for a holiday to visit my cousin. I've had around three to five days' tiling.

"A lot of the men waiting here have kids and they are more desperate to get work. I don't know how long I'll hang around today because it's quite cold. Maybe we'll go to the pub instead."

A police spokeswoman said: "In the short-term people do move on, but new people come to the area so efforts to find long-term solutions are ongoing. St Ann's Safer Neighbourhood team is planning to work with partners to carry out enforcement days as well as working to find long-term solutions."

A Wickes spokeswoman this week welcomed the renewal of the dispersal order, adding that the store had built a new perimeter fence and funded extra security as a result of the workers.

Matthew Smith, head of the UK Border Agency's Haringey Local Immigration team, said: "Those who do break the law will face action."

Employers can visit www.ukba.homeoffice.gov.uk/employers or call the UK Border Agency's Employers Helpline on 0300 123 4699.

Neighbours show a whitewash amid

A MAN who was sledging near Alexandra Palace remains in a critical condition in hospital after he crashed into a tree and sustained head injuries.

The 29-year-old was enjoying the snow on the bank in front of the palace in the early hours of Thursday when he was injured. He was taken to hospital where his condition remains "critical but stable", according to a Haringey police spokeswoman.

Schools across the borough were thrown into chaos after several inches of snow fell and many had to close. All but one opened again by Monday with exams taking place as planned – only St Peter In Chains Infant School, in Womersley Road, Hornsey, was still closed due to electricity problems.

Haringey Council's gritting crews were out in force, prioritising town centres, slopes and areas near elderly people's homes as the cold snap kicked in. More than 200 residents added to a list organised by Hornsey and Wood Green MP Lynne Featherstone, reporting roads which they say had not been properly gritted. Of these, 26 were "priority roads" including major thoroughfares and bus routes, which are supposed to be made safe first.

Councillor Brian Haley, cabinet member for environment and conservation, said: "All of our priority-1, 2 and 3 roads were gritted on or shortly after December 21, and the gritting team has been working consistently to clear the roads.

"If anyone has concerns, I'd urge them to get in touch with the council directly."

Home care and meals on wheels services were operating as normal, though elderly people were advised to stay inside wherever possible. Community-minded homeowners on the Ladder in Harringay got together after discussing it on www.harringayonline.com and armed themselves with salt and shovels to clear the Passage, which had turned into a virtual ice rink during the cold snap.

Green shoots for plotholders in bid to save allotments

A SITE of allotments which had been at risk of development has been offered for sale to campaigners for £30,000.

Neighbours battling to save their beloved allotments off Woodside Avenue have welcomed the move, which has come after months of negotiations, but warned the fight is still not over.

They now face a race against time to gather the funds by the end of March.

Owners Thames Water, which was planning to auction the site to the highest bidder, took it off the market after enraged plotholders feared they may lose the site which has been used to grow fruit and vegetables for more than 100 years.

"This is a great step forward, only possible because of the commitment of our supporters," said Rupert Lancaster, Fortis Green Community Allotments Trust spokesman.

After enlisting the help of more than 1,000 online petitioners, cross-party politicians and celebrities including Hugh Fearnley-Whittingstall, Joe Swift and Kate Humble, the group persuaded Thames Water to sell two thirds of the land – the allotment part only.

If the trust can clinch the deal, it hopes to make the land a community resource for the future where residents will be able to grow fruit and vegetables in security for generations to come.

"Even though Thames Water tells us it has no plans to develop the copse 'for the foreseeable future', we remain concerned," said Mr Lancaster.

"As soon as we are confident the allotment land is secure we will turn our efforts towards ensuring that the copse – a vital part of the local ecosystem – is also safe in perpetuity."

A spokesman for Thames Water said: "We are pleased an agreement has been reached with Fortis Green Community Allotments Trust. We believe this is the right outcome."

The trust is asking anyone wanting to support the campaign, donate or help with fundraising to visit www.savefortisgreenallotments.com

A police spokesman said: "If you recognise yourself or if you have any information about the identity of the man pictured, please contact the Trident incident room on 020 8733 4704 or if you wish to remain anonymous phone Crimestoppers on 0800 555 111."

APPOINTMENT OF MEMBERS FOR THE SCHOOL'S INDEPENDENT APPEALS PANEL

The school is looking for members of the public to serve on its School Appeals Panel to deal with school admission and exclusion appeals.

High Society, Upstairs at the Gatehouse

HALFWAY through I grumbled to myself rather like lower-class George Kitteridge at the high society swell around him.

"All style and no soul... typical toff torture..." that kind of thing. It wasn't a bad show, but lacked certain joie de vivre.

But, after the interval, I was swept away by a gorgeous, fizzing second half as if the whole cast had made merry with a jeroboam of Champagne like their characters.

It started with lovely, improvised interplay by the four waiters (excellent throughout) as we reclaimed our seats. Creative use was made of a few yellow ribbons and we were off, like a cork from that bottle, into, basically, A Midsummer Night's Dream – the musical.

Based on The Philadelphia Story, the '50s musical had, unusually, a life on screen before transferring to the stage. Director John Plews had rearranged it yet again, moving it to 1940s England, though the effect is negligible and it would have perhaps been more interesting and pertinent set in noughties Highgate.

Still, Plews must be praised for overseeing a highly polished, professional production, that is maybe a couple of songs too long, but is another worthy addition to the annual Upstairs Christmas musical jamboree. Expertly cast again, it stars blonde bombshell Kirby Hughes as spoilt Tracy Lord opposite persuasively suave Peter Kenworthy as her ex CK Dexter Haven.

But it's the supporting roles which really crackle and pop with the gifted Brendan Cull as Mike Connor – reminiscent of a young Jack Lemmon in accent and mannerism (the reporters are still American) – playing half of a winning double act opposite Hayley Emma Otway as Liz Imrie.

Special mention also to Jessica Bastick-Vines, effectively playing at least half her age as wicked little imp Dinah.

● Until January 31. 020 8340 3488.

Out and about

● THE West End heads north for one night only this Friday. Masters of the House features music from the blockbusters including Les Misérables, Miss Saigon, Cats, Chicago, Phantom Of The Opera and many more. Backstage stories and anecdotes intersperse hits at the Millfield Arts Centre in Edmonton. Show starts 8pm, tickets £17 (£15 concs). Call 020 8807 6680.

● A MYSTERY guest is the intriguing proposition at The Local this Friday. The popular music club hosts this particular artist – described as "bigger than the room" – along with support act Oh Ruin, Downstairs at the King's Head in Crouch End Hill, Crouch End. Take a gamble on Friday at 8pm. Ticket prices yet to be confirmed. For more details and reservations, call the box office on 020 8340 1028.

● A REFUGEE Rabbi, a southern belle, an isolated Jewish man, a Belgian immigrant and a suburban doctor come together in the play Rites Of Privacy. The UK premiere has just opened at the New End Theatre, Hampstead, and can be seen until February 14. Shows at 7.30pm, Tuesdays to Saturdays, and 3.30pm on Sundays. Tickets cost £18 (£16 concs). KEANE SET TO STAY

Staying put:
Redknapp denied that Robbie Keane could be on his way out of the club

By Lee Husson

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR manager Harry Redknapp has quashed rumours that Robbie Keane could be on his way out of White Hart Lane.

The Republic of Ireland striker has been linked with a move away from Spurs in the January transfer window, with Celtic and Aston Villa mooted as possible destinations.

Keane has struggled to regain his best form since his return to the club from Liverpool last year, scoring only six league goals this season – four of which came in the game against Burnley – and has slipped behind Jermain Defoe and Peter Crouch in the pecking order.

He was also said to be the instigator behind Spurs' infamous Christmas party where he “snuck” 15 members of the squad away to Dublin without the knowledge of his manager.

But Redknapp has played down the rumours, and insists the forward will be staying at the club.

“Please God, he’ll still be here in February,” said the boss.

“I don’t want to sell Robbie. There aren’t many Robbie Keanes about. He’s certainly not a player we’d want to lose.

“He is the captain, he’s here, he’s done a great job for us and is very important to us.

“There’s real competition between him, Roman Pavlyuchenko, Defoe and Crouch but unless someone comes up with £50million or something for him I can’t see any way he won’t be here.

“He’s part of the plans and I haven’t spoken to anyone about him leaving or wanting to leave.”

Meanwhile, Jonathan Woodgate is no nearer to a return after his groin injury has shown little sign of improvement since undergoing surgery at the end of last season.

The defender has made just three appearances this campaign, and the club have been unable to identify the cause of the injury.

“He’s had a few operations and we are finding it difficult to solve the problem,” Redknapp said.

“He is down but he’s hoping he’s on the way back. Hopefully it could go away in the same way as it came.”

Massara continues to strengthen his squad as two more sign-up for season

SCOTTISH international winger Dave Arnot and prop James Simon have become the latest players to sign for the London Skolars as they step up their preparations for the new rugby league season.

Arnot, who makes the move from Harlequins, made his full international debut last year, while Simon has played rugby union for Sale and has rugby league experience with Warrington and Blackpool.

Head coach James Massara said: “We are looking to freshen up the squad for the 2010 season, and bringing in someone like Dave is great for us.

“I was very impressed when I watched the tapes of James playing and I have been very impressed with him throughout pre-season. There is a real determination about the bloke, and I believe he will be a handful for the opposition this year.”

The Skolars, who finished bottom of Co-operative Championship One last time around, face their first match of the new season when they take on Harlequins in the Capital Challenge on January 22.

Massara added: “Pre-season is going very well so far. There is a good mix of old and new in the squad and the lads are really testing each other. The squad are all looking forward to the challenge of the 2010 season.”

Meanwhile, the Skolars have managed to retain the services of influential hooker Gareth Honor, who has made more than 150 appearances for the club during the past seven seasons.

“I feel that this is the best prepared the club has been going into the season,” he said. “The back-room staff have got us firing and there is a good blend of old and new players who are pulling together.

“I am excited about the squad we have. The likes of Paul Thorman and Jermaine Coleman who have been at the club for some seasons are quality players, and I am looking forward to playing with new faces like Liam Roach and Ollie Purslow.

“We are not putting any limits on our ambition this season, and play-off football is something I desperately want to experience with this club.”

Massara added: “Gareth is London Skolars through and through. He has bags of experience at this level and I am delighted to have him on board.

“Playing in his position is very tough on the body, and to have racked up more than 150 appearances is testament to his willingness to put his body on the line for the club.”
